Chapter 1 by William Parris

The ship had been travelling for days, all of the sailors were wary of their travels and were all looking forwards to reaching shore. The boat had a strong wooden hull with small cannon holes only wide enough for them to fire. Although, it had a strong arsenal of weapons, the ship wasn't that big, it had 15 sailors and 4 soldiers that were at different points of the ship. They had reached an unfamiliar island that was way of in what is now known as the Atlantic. The shore glistened in the hot, humid days. It was around 5 in the afternoon and it was already getting dark. It was also getting overcast and sailors worried. They were still a long way off shore. Also, their main worry, storms

Chapter 2 by intellikat

Hell's bells and more shit, thought the first mate. Hell of a lot of worries on this ship. Best be allaying of the fears of the men with a bit of shuffleboard.
